

New World Order = A Disarmed America

There are two prerequisites for safely bringing in the Marxist Libtard Demoncrap (MLD) New World Order. First, the people who are not convinced that surrendering national sovereignty and permitting themselves to be “equalized” with China’s oppressed and Mexico’s and Central America’s underclasses are good things must be silenced via “hate” laws designed to criminalize any expression of fact or opinion which can be considered and labeled “racist.” Second, the same people must be disarmed, so that they have no recourse but to obey MLD laws and remain silent about it.

In the United States the number of people likely to take up arms against an oppressive centralized government is not large at this time. We live in an age when comfort and safety are valued more highly than freedom. If economic conditions are manipulated by the MLDs as desired, and worsen substantially, however, those few willing to fight for freedom may persuade many others who are more concerned with their pocketbooks than their honor to take up arms as well. And if that should happen the MLD orchestrated New World Order will be in serious trouble.

What all the foregoing means is that the present drive to disarm American citizens is motivated by a fear of rebellion, not by a fear of crime, let alone mass shootings (which are nothing more than repetitive opportunities to attack Second Amendment backers).

The MLDs in the media and leftwing government, constantly beating the drums for the New World Order, understand that, as the program of “globalization” proceeds, millions of newly dispossessed citizens will be angry and desperate to push back. If these citizens still have firearms in their possession, they may strike at their despoilers.

Patriots need to understand these facts as well as their enemies do, and they must not be bashful about stating it plainly and forcefully. They need to drop the pretense that the purpose of the Second Amendment is to protect the rights of hunters, target shooters, and collectors of antique firearms. When Senator Schumer or various other MLD Congress persons hold a semiautomatic rifle or pistol up for the television cameras and say that “no legitimate sportsman needs a weapon like this,” they are laughing behind every voter’s back at the same time.

The needs of sportsmen and hobbyists are utterly without importance or significance when compared with the two serious needs served by the private ownership of firearms: (1) the need of the individual for weapons with which to protect them self, their family, and their property against the growing hordes of care less criminals in our disintegrating, liberalized, “socialist” society; and (2) the need of the patriot for weapons with which to keep governmental tyranny (which feeds such lawlessness thinking) in check.

The manipulators understand this psychology all too well, and they are exploiting it fully in their campaign to disarm Americans. They are using the fear of soaring crime and violence (which have grown from MLD seeds planted years before) to stampede the frightened, unthinking voters into letting their only means of protection from this crime and violence be taken away from them — into giving up their only means of settling scores with the manipulators of the media and their collaborators in the government who have made such a cesspool of America.

Crime and violence can only increase, of course, because almost no one has the courage and honesty to discuss their real causes, much less to do anything realistic about cleaning up the mess that has been made within America; primarily within MLD controlled cities and states. Therefore, the stampede will continue until law-abiding Americans — that is, the ones who obey all the laws — have been completely disarmed. I’ll repeat that: The present campaign to disarm Americans will not abate. Neither the controlled media nor the government will back away from a goal of total disarmament of the civilian population. They won't reach this goal in a single step, but they'll continue taking steps until they do reach it. The target now is semiautomatic rifles; a.k.a. falsely labeled "assault weapons". Later on it will be all semiautomatic pistols ("assault pistols"?). Then it will be other types of handguns. After that it will be all firearms which hold more than three cartridges. "That's all a sportsman really needs," they'll say. Then it will be all firearms except muzzle-loaders; "...because that's what the framers really meant". Somewhere along the line, various types of ammunition will be banned. "Only a criminal would want a cartridge like this," they'll say.

Before too many steps have been taken there will be compulsory registration of all firearms and firearm owners, in order to facilitate confiscation later; "After all that's what they do in civilized nations like Canada."

This bleak prospect has a silver lining, and it's this: a very substantial portion of gun owners will defy the oppressive government, "cling" to their Second Amendment right and their guns and involuntarily become ipso facto outlaws rather than give up their weapons, if the populations of California and New Jersey are at all representative of the country as a whole. When bans on so-called "assault rifles" were enacted in those two states fewer than 10% of the people owning such weapons turned them in.

Bans of the California and New Jersey sort have a marvelously salutary effect on the attitude of the people who refuse to comply with the bans. Relatively few of these people are "militant" patriots or committed "revolutionaries". The great majority are simply people who have enough character, enough backbone and common sense, to refuse to let them be stampeded along with the sheep into giving up their only effective means of self-defense in a time of civil disorder. Most of them have been law-abiding citizens all of their lives, and it is not an easy decision for them to consciously disobey so many unconstitutional laws — especially laws which could send them to prison for years. They are not happy about being forced to become so-called outlaws. Once they have crossed that bridge, however, they should have a much healthier attitude toward the government. Most will see it thenceforth as their potential enemy. Many will be ready to fight for their life, liberty and pursuit of happiness once again when the time comes for fighting.

They will have passed the primary test of a constitutional republic (vs. “socialist democratic”) form of government in the new world of MLD repression and revolution in which we are entering now. The more such armed, angry “outlaws” the government makes, the better it will be for all of us in the long run.

I’ll leave you with this last word: Don’t do anything violent or foolish. Don’t do anything prematurely. We are in a very serious situation, a situation of extreme danger for the future of our country, and we must use the utmost prudence in dealing with it.

Keep your firearms out of sight, but within reach. The day will come for using them. The day for a great re-cleansing of this nation will come. Until that day, keep your powder dry.
