

WHAT IS MARXISM AND WHAT ARE “MARXIST LIBTARD DEMONCRAPS”?

Updated: 09/02/2024

Marxism is a complex concept to nail down and define. One could debate Marx's theories, teachings and conclusions until the cows come home. But, what it boils down to in the long run is a denouncement of the ways that so called “capitalists” or the “rich”, or in Marx's terms the “bourgeoisie”, employ others to produce goods and services and to generate “profits” within a capitalist driven economic “state” or “country”.

Per Marx, these “capitalists” are the people who have figured out how to own property (land, buildings, machinery, etc.) and arrange it into a form of “capital” (the infrastructure used to produce goods and services) and who then hire others, the “workers” or employees, or in Marx's terms the “proletariat”, to perform any needed “labor” but without sharing the “profits” on an equal basis with the value of said labor.

Thus, the “rich”, in Marx's terms, take advantage of the working class, to one degree or another, and that is why they become “richer” over time. Marxism also outlines the theory that, eventually, the workers will become resistant to the idea of working for said capitalists and will find ways to revolt and attempt to convert society into a planned society whereby the means of production, i.e. all “capital” itself, is owned not by the “capitalists” but by the people instead.

For example, according to the Marxist theoretician and revolutionary Vladimir Lenin, “the principal content of Marxism” was “Marx's economic doctrine”. In Lenin's mind, Marx believed that capitalists/bourgeois and their economist supporters were promoting what he saw as the “lie” whereby “the interests of the capitalist and of the worker (the production of goods and services to meet customer needs) are ... one and the same”. Therefore, Lenin believed that they did this by purporting the concept that “the fastest possible growth of productive capital” was best not only for the wealthy capitalists but also for the workers because it provided them with employment and prosperity.

Some notes on Lenin...

Around 1903, Lenin played a key role in a RSDLP ideological split, leading the Bolshevik faction against Julius Martov's Mensheviks. Encouraging insurrection during Russia's failed Revolution of 1905, he later campaigned for the First World War to be transformed into a Europe-wide proletarian revolution (the poor against the rich), which, as a Marxist, Lenin believed would cause the overthrow of capitalism and its replacement with socialism. After the 1917 February Revolution ousted the Tsar and established a Provisional Government, Lenin returned to Russia (from Europe) to play a leading role in the October Revolution, in which the Bolsheviks overthrew the new regime.

Lenin's Bolshevik government initially shared power with the Left Socialist Revolutionaries, elected soviets, and a multi-party Constituent Assembly, although by 1918 it had centralized power in the new Communist Party. Lenin's communist administration redistributed land among the peasantry and nationalized banks and large-scale industry. It withdrew from the First World War by signing a treaty with the Central Powers and promoted world revolution through the Communist International. Opponents of this communist movement were suppressed in the Red Terror, a violent campaign administered by the communist state security services; the result of which was that tens of thousands who did not embrace Lenin's leadership and communist rule were killed or interned in concentration camps. His administration defeated right and left-wing anti-Bolshevik armies in the Russian Civil War from 1917 to 1922 and oversaw the Polish–Soviet War of 1919–1921. Responding to wartime devastation, famine, and popular uprisings, in 1921, Lenin encouraged economic growth through the market-oriented New Economic Policy. Several non-Russian nations secured independence after 1917, but three re-united with Russia through the formation of the Soviet Union in 1922.

The Soviet Union grew in both power and range throughout the Second World War and during the Cold War eras but eventually collapsed under more revolts, proving that even Marxism and socialism, and the theories that the people will somehow form a way of life where capitalism is ruled out, is easier said than done.

Modern day “demoncratic socialists” (a label used to cover for real intentions) seem to have short term memory loss; preferring to repeat the experiments of the past and to repeat history as often as possible vs. support a more liberty oriented conservative approach to society and government.

Genocide scholar Adam Jones claims that “there is very little in the record of human experience to match the violence unleashed between 1917, when the [Lenin] Bolsheviks took power, and 1953, when Joseph Stalin died and the Soviet Union moved to adopt a more restrained and largely non-murderous domestic policy.” He notes the exceptions being the Khmer Rouge (in relative terms) and Mao's rule in China (in absolute terms).

This new way of thinking (modern Marxism) was invented because socialists believed that common ownership of the "means of production" (that is the industries, the land, the wealth of natural resource, the trade apparatus, the wealth of the society, etc.) will abolish the, supposedly, exploitative working conditions experienced under capitalism. Through a working class revolution, the state (which Marxists see as a weapon for the subjugation of one class by another) is seized and used to suppress the hitherto "ruling class" of capitalists; by implementing a commonly-owned and, supposedly, "democratically controlled" workplace or environment. Thus in a Marxist's vision of the world the people eventually create a society of communism, which Marxists see as true democracy. Such a society, Marxists claim, will result in an economy based on co-operation, fulfillment of important human needs and overall social betterment, rather than a competition for profit on the part of many independently acting profit seekers. This would also be the end of multi-class society, which Marx saw as the fundamental division of all hitherto existing history.

Marx saw work (the effort by humans to transform the environment to meet their needs) as a fundamental feature of human kind. However, capitalism, in which the product of the workers' labor is somehow taken from them and sold at market rates (via the exchange of money) rather than being part of the worker's life, is therefore alienating to the worker. Additionally, the worker is compelled by various means (some better than others) to work harder, faster and for longer hours. While this is happening, the employer is constantly trying to save on labor costs: by paying the workers less, figuring out how to use cheaper equipment and/or more automation, etc. This allows the employer (the capitalist) to extract the largest amount of work/productivity (and therefore potential wealth) from their workers and investments and, therefore, grow richer at the workers' expense. Thus Marx implied that the fundamental nature of capitalist society is no different from that of a "slave" society: one small group (the capitalists) of society exploiting the larger group (the workers).

Marxists think they can fix this problem through redistribution of wealth (capital and property) and by developing a system of common ownership of the means of production. Marxists desire that the "profit motive" should, ideally, be eliminated and the motive of furthering human flourishing should be taught or introduced to offset it. Because the surplus produced by the workers is, ideally, the rightful property of the society as whole – even the lazy or non-productive – vs. the gain of the capitalist, there should be no classes of producers (workers) and appropriators (capitalist). Additionally, the "state", which has its origins in the hands of retainers (politicians) supposedly hired/installed by the ruling classes to protect their economic privilege, will disappear (something groups like modern day ANTIFA would dearly love to see as well).

"Withering away of the state" is a Marxist concept coined by Friedrich Engels, referring to the idea that with the realization of the ideals of socialism the social institution of a "state" will eventually become obsolete and disappear (no borders thus no country or "state") as the society will be able to somehow govern itself without the state and its coercive enforcement of the law... and social boundaries/limits of any kind.

That said, from my point of view, Marxists are people who could care less (in the long run) about the "rule of law" or a republican form of government like we have enjoyed within the USA for 200+ years (and which is just one reason so many call the U.S.A. a democracy vs. a Constitutional Republic such as it actually is); whereby the Constitution is the foundation upon which our government is based.

In short: Marxists are people who will take any actions to twist reality and subvert the rule of law (so as to rise up and gain power) and they will pull any tricks to "resist" and subvert a stable Constitutional government and society (such as our representative government), to "resist" and subvert any limitation on state control and power, to "resist" and subvert individual freedom, and to "resist" and subvert any capitalist means of production. They prefer the idea of organizing a form of "mob rule", rising up against those who are better off (what they refer to as an uprising), and overthrowing any form of government which nurtures "capitalism" itself... they think that once the current society is disposed of that they will be able to fill the void with a nirvana form of socialism instituted behind it.

What then is a Libtard?

Libtards are people who would have you think, or who expound, that they are “liberals” (their own lie which they certainly are NOT) but who, in reality, are nothing more than retarded/degraded, anti-social crackpots. They are mental midgets who are devoid of any self-control, who have few, if any, real moral values which they follow; their morals/values are obviously corrupt in their very nature and on their very face (even though they would deny it). Libtards are often disruptive to any stable society and simply want to “upset the apple cart” as a pastime or objective (and replace it with some imagined ideology even they have yet to formalize... “We have to pass the bill so that you can find out what is in it, away from the fog of the controversy...”).

You can easily recognize a libtard because they often become politicians who use “group think” to control others (notice how well demoncraps [defined below] band together to outvote others who do not embrace their Marxist/socialist goals) and they are, likewise, the common people who vote for politicians who embrace Marxism/socialism without any understanding of the true nature of such politicians or their long range motives. To a libtard any politician who promises them a life free of work or toil or free of negative consequences for their negative actions, and free of the need to establish gain through meritorious effort, is a worthy politician to vote for. Libtards also generate politicians from within their own ranks who promise other libtards free benefits (such as free education, free healthcare, free housing, free food, free money, free abortions, free property, etc.) and who claim that “democracy” (one person and one vote... without any need to understand consequences of actions or choices) is better than republicanism and more important and overpowering than any claimed rule of law (ever notice how demoncraps install libtard judges within the courts and then proceed to break the law and get away with it over and over again?). Libtards could care less about Republicanism; and the concepts of a Constitutional Republic and rule of law are alien to them and play little if any role in their daily lives or long range objectives.

Likewise, libtards could care less about true “individual rights”, which apply equally to all citizens, and prefer, instead, to cook up various group rights out of thin air, which apply only to some minority group which feels their objectives take priority over the citizenry as a whole (a woman’s right vs. the rights of the people as a whole, or a homosexual’s right vs. the rights of all humans instead, or a minority group’s right vs. the rights of everyone equally, etc.).

Modern republicanism, as opposed to libtard thinking, is the guiding political philosophy of the United States (until recently) that has been a major part of American civic thought since its founding. It stresses liberty (vs. overwhelming control) and unalienable rights – shared equally by everyone at the individual level – as central values, making the citizens within a country “sovereign” as a whole; rather than various sub-classes having more weight or value than other sub-classes (the opposite of Marxist ideology which focuses instead on the “collective”). Republicanism is based on the election and employment of extremely educated and thoughtful “representatives” who can master complex problems within society as a whole... and it rejects monarchy, aristocracy and inherited political power. Republicanism expects (and requires) citizens, and those who represent them within government, to be virtuous and faithful in their performance of civic duties, and it vilifies corruption at every level (social and governmental). American republicanism was articulated and first practiced by the “Founding Fathers” in the 18th century. For them, republicanism represented more than a particular form of government. It was a way of life, a core ideology, an uncompromising commitment to liberty, and a total rejection of aristocracy and central government (Marxist/socialist) control over the lives of the masses.

Libtards have no idea what republicanism is and, as a result, they tend to embrace mob rule instead. They seem to think that as long as the “majority” has ordained a path forward that such a path will reap their desired rewards. They are more than willing to throw caution to the wind and to march in the streets and rebel against the “status quo”; and they are willing to disrupt social order simply to achieve their short sighted objectives, no matter how much suffering and despair their actions may bring in the long run. Such behavior is perfectly acceptable to Marxist Libtards and is easily rationalized as “freedom of expression”. Thus, they tend to elect people who will embrace their anti-social behaviors, as they look the other way while those very same elected officials work diligently to undermine and corrupt the fabric of the society which was created before the libtard voters placed them in office.

And what is a Demoncrap?

The noun form of this term, a demoncrap, is a coupling or union of the concept previously referred to as demo[cracy] (with its many and various flaws... such as “majority” or “mob rule”) with the word “crap”, which is what, more often than not, arises or is elected when the majority’s votes are counted.

The product of most elections, due to the very nature of a majority of ignorant, libtard voters, is corrupt leaders (demoncraps), who make all sorts of false promises and/or UNREALIZABLE benefits to their libtard voters... benefits that are never achieved in reality. Quite often demoncraps claim they are “republicans” or other party affiliates in order to gain election and then they vote for laws which only a true demoncrap would vote for. Politicians who claim to be “democrats”, or who are often labelled RINOs, more often than not, are nothing short of liars who distort their positions simply to persuade the average libtard voter to put them in power, so they can turn around and undermine society and reshape government and social law to meet their own ideological needs and goals; to gain power and control. The “power of persuasion” is the ace card in the libtard political deck which all demoncrap politicians employ. Mob rule is embraced by demoncraps; it is the universe they manipulate to achieve their own riches and social positions. They are the “puppet masters”, tugging on the emotional strings of the populace in order to motivate the libtards among them to put them in office and, in the long run, to undermine whichever country they wish to convert to Marxism as well.

Thus, the combination of these three terms – Marxist Libtard Demoncrap – pretty much sums up the condition which now exists between the ears of most citizens within most countries on the planet... now days; and which will soon describe the majority of U.S. citizenry as well, IF people don’t wake up and pay attention pretty damn soon.

Addendum 1: If you made it this far, which is surprising to even me, you will note that I never used the phrase “crony capitalism” when discussing the pros and cons of “capitalism” and “Marxism” or (lower case) “socialism”. Crony capitalism is the rotten apple which gives capitalism its bad reputation. That’s the form of capitalism into which the Marxist Libtard Demoncraps pour piles of money; and into various campaigns to get their corrupt representatives elected which, in turn, socially manipulate the capitalist landscape (via their laws and regulations) in order to enrich both themselves and their already rich, crony backers (while the RINOs on the other side of the political isle do exactly the same thing). Thanks to these crony capital activities the “swamp” has managed to pit their Marxist Libtard Demoncraps and their subversive RINO counterparts against the rest of us in order to undermine the greatest political system on the planet and, hopefully, capitalize from their efforts in the process.

Addendum 2: Why everyone should worry about Marxist Libtard Demoncraps...

Israel Relabeled As ‘Palestine’ On Map In Rashida Tlaib’s Office

| January 4, 2019 | By Alyssa Fisher

A change was made to the map in Rashida Tlaib’s office the day she was sworn into Congress: a Post-it Note smacked next to Israel, pointing to Palestine.

Tlaib of Michigan, a Palestinian-American, was one of the first two Muslim women to take her seat in the House — and she shared her heritage proudly. She took her oath on a special Koran (a 1734 English translation that belonged to Thomas Jefferson) and wore a red embroidered thobe, a
